Holding down tuition rates and enhancing internet technology tools to further higher education are just some of the goals North Dakota University system chancellor Bill Goetz will focus on during the 2011 legislative session.

Goetz says keeping tuition rates affordable helps not only students and their families but the university system.

Goetz says the proposed Rhoades Science Center renovation project has made it to the top of the capital improvements list for the next legislative session.

In the end, North Dakota Legislators will have to approve the plan before the renovation becomes a reality.

Goetz has been on a statewide tour visiting with North Dakota legislators discussing his proposals for the 2011 Higher Education budget.

Goetz visited the Valley City State University campus on Thursday.
