Forum editorial:

PRAIRIE ROSES: To Dan Faust and the students of Valley City (N.D.) State University for harvesting some 28 tons of locally grown produce for the Great Plains Food Bank (Forum, Sept. 28, Page 1). It took less than two hours last Tuesday for Faust, a retired pastor, and 200 students to harvest squash and other produce from a 2-acre plot on his farm. He’s been helping the food bank for about three years, and every year the amount of produce has increased. He started out picking a few loads of squash for the food bank. This year the donation was measured in tons. It’s a wonderful way to serve the community and an equally admirable way to involve students in the effort.

Forum editorials represent the opinion of Forum management and the newspaper’s Editorial Board.